

DISEASED HOGS ARE REPORTED IN RIVER HERE

Conservation Officer Locates Cholera-Stricken Animals in Stream

HEALTH IS MENACED

Sheriff Orders Carcasses Taken from Scioto

County and city officials were stirred this week when Frank D. Voorhees, Pickaway-co. conservation officer, reported to them that he had found 20 hogs, stricken by cholera, thrown into the Scioto river, north of the red bridge.

Immediate action was taken by Prosecuting Attorney E. L. Crist, who notified Sheriff Charles Radcliff to have the owner of the hogs take them from the river and either burn or bury them. Radcliff immediately did this and the possibility of serious results was eliminated.

DISEASE COULD SPREAD

Mr. Voorhees, patrolling the river on both sides, observed the hogs in the water and also their condition. He became alarmed over the possibility of the cholera being spread through different sources and, considering it a matter for county and city to handle he notified officials. It was then that hurried action was taken.

WILL TAKE ACTION

The county acted leniently in dealing with the persons responsible for the hogs being in the river but Prosecuting Attorney Crist stated Thursday that any other reports of hogs or any other dead animals being put in county streams will bring prosecution to the full extent of the law.

The best way to get rid of diseased animals is by burning, it has been pointed out.

Mr. Voorhees should be commended for his prompt action in reporting the hogs in the water and the county officials also deserve commendation for dealing promptly with the situation. Probably the farmer who put the animals in the river did not think of the things that might have resulted.

Derringer, Gabby Street's Choice to Start; Mack Is Doubtful

ODDS 8-5 ON A'S

Gray Fox Expected to Use Lefty Grove

By JAMES L. KILLGALLEN
International News Service Sports Writer.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—Amid an atmosphere fairly tingling with excitement, the 1931 world series, the champagne cocktail of American sports, swung into being before nearly 40,000 spectators at Sportsman's Park this afternoon when the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals clash for the second consecutive year in quest of baseball's highest prize.

BETTERS FAVOR MACK

NEW YORK, October 1.—Broadway bettors are laying their dough on the St. Louis Cardinals to cop the opening game of the series.

According to Jack Doyle, Broadway's veteran, betting commissioner, more than 50 men placed their money with him on the Red Birds to win the first contest, while only one wanted to back the American league club.

the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals clash for the second consecutive year in quest of baseball's highest prize.

Drama and color, always a part of this annual picturesque classic, is the lure that has drawn thousands of visitors to St. Louis from all parts of the country. The city itself is delirious with anticipation and intensely partisan. By game time, 1:30 p. m., the ball park will be jammed with one of the wildest and wildest assemblages that ever gathered to root a home team victory.

NATION TO LISTEN

And when the umpire cries, "Play!" the entire nation will carry the play-by-play picture of the contest to every hamlet, town and city in the country. Thousands of electric signs, business generally will be at a standstill, once hostilities get under way. The news of struggle will even penetrate far distant lands.

While a mighty hubbub was in progress in St. Louis today, the contending teams, the A's and the Cards, were quietly and grimly preparing for eventualities. Both clubs, to a man, were supremely confident of ultimate victory in the series of four games out of seven. However, neither 69-year-old Connie Mack, nor the grizzled sergeant of the Argonne, Gabby Street, who is piloting the Cardinals, would make a flat prediction of victory.

MONEY CRISIS IN OHIO SEEN BY OFFICIALS

Deficit Expected in Few Months According to Howard L. Bevis

COUNT FINANCES

New Revenue Sources Thought Necessary

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1.—Ohio's state government is headed straight toward a financial crisis, it was learned here today.

When the crisis will come to a head is a matter of speculation, but statehouse financial experts are generally agreed that it will come sooner or later within the next few months, and that it may be necessary for Governor George White to call a special session of the state legislature to pass remedial legislation.

PREDICT DEFICIT

Some experts predict that the state's general revenue fund may develop a severe case of deficit within the end of this year.

State Finance Director Howard L. Bevis, however, believes that the fund will hold out until next Spring.

The revenue to be received by the state during the next three months, Bevis thinks, will be sufficient to pay off all the necessary current operating expenses of the state government and still leave a balance in the general revenue fund.

Payments from the general revenue fund during October, November and December, Bevis estimated today, for expenses incurred in state governmental operations will approximate $9,900,000.

The state revenue during the three-month period, Bevis said, should approximate $11,600,000, which added to the balance of approximately $4,996,000 that existed in the general revenue fund Oct. 1, boosted the total amount from which payments could be made to $16,596,000.

Bevis said he anticipated expenditures up until the first of next year to aggregate about $8,000,000, which would leave a balance of approximately $8,596,000 on Jan. 1.

Even if the $3,700,000 transferred to the general revenue fund early this year from the highway and soldiers' bonus funds were paid back before the end of the year, there still would be a balance of approximately $2,996,000. If Bevis' estimate of anticipated revenues holds good.

SENATOR TO FIGHT SUIT

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1.—State Senator David P. Lorbach, Cincinnati Democrat, today made his first attempt to fight the $50,000 damage suit brought against him by C. J. A motion to quash service of the summons was filed in Franklin-co. common pleas court by Lorbach's attorneys.

Lorbach, who was chairman of the investigating committee claimed exemption on the ground that he was "actively engaged" in senatorial duties at the time. He refused to accept service of the summons.

Knisley sued the senator following a special meeting of the committee in Cleveland during which Lorbach said he was the man who offered him a bribe to halt the quiz. Knisley denied the accusation and immediately brought suit.

Dark Velvet and Ostrich Plume Factors in New Autumn Fashions

The Renaissance of Real Millinery That Had Its Start Early This Year Will Be Continued This Fall with Velvet the Favorite Medium, Brims Will Outdo Berets and Turbans in Popularity.

The Autumn fashions for millinery and dresses constitute a great triumph for velvet. Not only in America is the popular material enjoying a vogue such as never before, but also in Paris is it extremely popular. The charming evening frock, above at left, is a Parisian model of dark transparent velvet. It is fashioned on graceful form-fitting lines, opening to a wide flair at the skirts. The coat dress at right is also a Paris creation, with dark velvet again the medium. This model has a detachable collar, the removal of which transforms the coat into a dress. Upper center is a typical example of the Autumn style in millinery. It is an American creation of black velvet, simply trimmed with a white feather in the new headline brim. The lower model is of felt, featuring the white ostrich spray. The addition of a necklace of black and white beads greatly enhances the charm of the hat.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Eight new passenger liners, including some of the finest vessels in the American merchant marine, will have made their maiden voyage to San Francisco within the next 15 months. These new boats, all under construction or about to have their keels laid are costing more than $46,000,000, according to a check up among the various local steamship lines building the ships. First of the new liners will be the $8,000,000 tubo-electric steamer President Coolidge, due here from New York in October on its first voyage to Manila. Its sister ship the President Hoover was recently here. The two ships are said to be the largest merchant vessels ever built in America.

Two new turbine steamers for the Australian-South Seas service from San Francisco—the San Francisco and the Mariposa—will appear on their maiden trips next year. Each is to cost $7,500,000. The United Fruit Lines company and the Panama Mail Lines company are building two new ships each for Pacific ocean waters.

MOTHER DENIES MURDER CHARGE

LEBANON, Ind., Sept. 30.—Mrs. Carrie Simmons, being tried on the charge that she killed two of her daughters, steadfastly maintained her innocence today as attorneys moved to complete a jury.

Eight men were tentatively accepted by both state and defense as court opened.

Bea Seifert, county prosecutor, has qualified all the jurors on the death penalty. Mrs. Simmons, a farmer's wife and a church worker, is accused of having provided the strychnine-larded sandwiches which killed Alice Simmons, 10, and her sister, Virginia, 14, at a family picnic three months ago.

SCHOOL LEVIES UP

CHILLICOTHE.—The continuance of school in four school districts of Ross-co for the full period of 32 weeks is dependent entirely upon tax levies which will be voted on in these districts during the fall elections. J. L. Fortney, Ross-co superintendent of schools, declared failure of the tax levy to pass would mean curtailment of school work.

Glass Print Operation

A glass print is made by covering a blackened glass with white opaque varnish and drawing the picture on it with an etching needle. An impression is then taken on a sensitized paper exposed to light through the glass. The print is really a kind of photograph, although resembling an etching in effect.

Nebraska Stands Alone

Nebraska is the only state which has a bank deposit guarantee law. In 1925 Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, Mississippi, South Dakota, North Dakota and Washington operated under a bank deposit guarantee law but all have been repealed with the exception of Nebraska.

House Control Now In Balance

WASHINGTON—Control of the next house of representatives swung like an erratic finger today, pointing first to one party and then at the other.

Democratic chances of organizing the new house were materially enhanced by the smashing Democratic victory won in the seventh Missouri district yesterday.

Robert D. Johnson, the Democrat candidate, won by nearly 10,000 votes over the Republican candidate, John W. Palmer, and an independent wet candidate, L. L. Collins.

The seventh Missouri is ordinarily Democratic by a small margin, although it elected a Republican in 1928, and the overwhelming figures rolled up by the regular Democratic candidate against two opponents were a source of gratification to party headquarters here.

The Missouri outcome makes the present house line-up stand Republicans, 214, Democrats, 213; and the Democrats copped their every move.

Johnson savagely attacked the Hoover administration and the federal farm board, with his Republican opponent adopting the defensive role.

Democratic leaders were jubilant today over the outcome. They asserted it afforded an insight into the political temper of the country toward the administration, and held it an omen of 1932.

Neither the Republican national committee nor the Republican congressional committee would make any statement concerning the Missouri outcome, but J. M. Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, hailed it as indicating certain Democratic organization of the next house.

Farmer Labor, 1, vacancies, 7.

Three of these vacancies, in the 8th Michigan, 2nd Pennsylvania, and 1st Wisconsin districts, are considered certain to remain Republican. Similarly, three others, the 20th Ohio, 7th New York, and 1st Georgia, are considered certain to remain Democratic. The elections are to be held early in November.

If these party expectations prevail, the Republicans will have 217, the Democrats 216, and the control probably will hinge upon the outcome in the first Ohio district, where a successor is to be chosen for the late Nick Longworth. If the Democrats are successful there the parties will be tied at 217 each, putting the line Farmer-Labor member in the conspicuous position of being in the king seat.

Republicans made a strenuous effort to win the seventh Missouri. They sent national speakers into the district as well as money, and the Democrats copped their every move.

All Outdoors

(Secretary of the Outdoor Writers Assn. of America). Written Exclusively for International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O.—Big game in Canadian provinces will be more plentiful than usual this year. This is good news for big game hunters who have been wondering how the drought of the past two years had affected moose, deer, partridges, and other game, since it had become known that there was a scarcity of wild ducks and other waterfowl in the breeding grounds of Northern Canada.

From the most reliable sources—dependable guides and scouts—who have canoed and tramped far into the wild country during the summer, come reports of plenty of moose, deer, bear and ruffed grouse.

The ruffed grouse season, incidentally, will be open in Quebec and New Brunswick, but will be closed in Ontario.

The mild winter was responsible for the increase in moose and deer and for the unusually large spread of antlers reported. Good law enforcement in Canada has also helped to bring about an increase of big game and of game birds.

Throughout the entire district from Hurkett to Metagama in Ontario, hunters can depend upon a much better grouse season than usual. The deer, too, are more plentiful than ever. From the French River district comes assurance that there is a plentiful supply of whitetails.

Quebec authorities are extremely optimistic over the prospects for deer and moose. From Kipawa on the east through regions most hunted for this game, all the old reliable guides report a better supply than ordinary. The game, the reports say, has not been so plentiful as it often did formerly in early September. This is explained by the absence of people working in timber who often cause the wary big bull moose to move away to the most remote, inaccessible regions at the first indications of the arrival of fall.

Nearly everywhere in Quebec, grouse (partridges) are plentiful—the first time this can be stated truthfully since the grouse disease decimated such a great number a few years ago.

New Brunswick is not backward in declaring that the fall of 1931 will be one of the best for deer and moose which sportsmen have had for several years. The same reasons apply to New Brunswick that apply to Quebec.

Bird hunters will find splendid woodcock shooting from McAdam, N. B., almost to the outskirts of St. John. Like last year, there will be an open season on grouse (partridges) from October 1st to October 15th with the daily bag limited to six birds. Despite the great increase in these game birds, sportsmen are in favor of retaining the same bag limit as last year—six—and also the short open season.

Nova Scotia guides also report an abundance of moose and deer. Bear are quite plentiful too. The fishing season which just closed has been very good. Guides in Maine also say that deer are showing a substantial increase and that many good herds have been reported. Some years the heads or spread of antlers are not as in others but this year the heads are quite large on an average, it is reported.

AT THE CLIFTONA
A stormy love story whose chief characters, a man and a woman fight bitterly against love until it conquers them. Played by two of the screen's most popular actors, Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard. Written by one of the world's foremost women writers, Mary Roberts Rinehart. "I Take This Woman" at the Cliftona Friday and Saturday, is a fresh, actionful, entertaining story, on a subject that has always intrigued human interest, the woman tamed by love.

Cooper is seen as a likable, easy-going Westerner, a man with very human faults who wins sympathy and admiration for his rugged strength. Miss Lombard, lately seen in a list of charming comedy-romances ("It Pays to Advertise," "Up Pops the Devil"), has her big chance at dramatic acting and takes it. A woman, beautiful, wealthy, spoiled, impetuous, desired by men and using them for her own purposes, yet imbued with spirit and a sporting sense of fairness.

Caught in a sudden whirlwind of love, the woman takes the man for better or for worse, confident it will be for better, only to find it is for worse. The story is presented with a wealth of humor, a touch of pathos, and a balancing current of down-to-earth drama, that brings the picture to a stirring climax.

AT THE GRAND
A great favorite with audiences is now appearing at the Grand Theatre in her latest picture, "Madonna of the Streets," the Columbia film adapted from W. E. Maxwell's story, "The Ragged Messenger." It is none other than Evelyn Brent, the alluring, beautiful magnetic personality of the screen.

An excellent cast has been assembled to support Miss Brent. Robert Ames, one of screendom's most popular leading men, one who is in constant demand to play opposite the most outstanding women stars in the industry, plays the leading male role opposite Miss Brent. John Robertson directed. He is considered one of Hollywood's ace directors. Among the prominent stars who have come under his guidance are Richard Barthelmess and Mary Pickford.

ITS THE BIKE AT WELLESLEY
WELLESLEY, Mass.—If there is any traffic congestion about Wellesley College this coming term it won't be from the automobile—but from the old-fashioned bicycle. More than 400 freshmen have taken to pedaling their way to class rooms and, it being an old college custom, have taken to the bike in preference to the automobile. The distances from the freshmen dormitories in some instances are lengthy and then again the bike comes in handy for a trip to the village.

SCHOOL OF AIR TO BEGIN ITS THIRD YEAR ON OCTOBER 12TH

COLUMBUS, O.—With Governor George White stepping to the microphone to broadcast a greeting to hundreds of schoolrooms and thousands of school children, the Ohio School of the Air, which has blossomed from an experiment into one of the best known schools in the country, will start its third year on Monday, Oct. 12.

B. H. "Uncle Ben" Darrow, the radio schoolmaster, made that announcement from his offices in the state department of education.

Dr. Beverly O. Skinner, who was appointed by Governor White since the last meeting of the "class" supervised by "Uncle Ben," also will salute the state's school children over the radio on that occasion.

Still a pioneer but no longer an experimenter, "Uncle Ben" will be able to launch this third "term" because parents have learned to regard the Ohio school of the Air as valuable.

The fact that women—mostly mothers—listened in from their homes, and recognized the true value of the broadcasts, was the main factor in the rapid increase of the number of listeners in the school rooms," Darrow said.

In the course of literature and English for high schools, the school of the air this year will present a greater number of dramatizations of the classics than ever before. During the first few weeks, the Crosby Players will give "Rip Van Winkle," "Evangeline," "Merchant of Venice," and "Romeo and Juliet."

The Walnut high school players,

Cincinnati, will present scenes from "The Tempest." Regular instructions in English will be given by Joseph Ries and Joseph W. Fichter, assistant director of education.

Since Ohio possesses an authority on the life and customs of the Moundbuilders, it is quite natural that a series of talks by Dr. Henry C. Shetrone, director of the Ohio state museum, has been included in the school of the air's program. Along with its regular lesson leaflet, "The Courier," there is being distributed a 42-page booklet, entitled "The Primer of Ohio Archaeology," by Dr. Shetrone. The primer is illustrated. It affords service as a textbook for use in the classrooms in conjunction with the radio talks each Friday at 2 p. m.

About 100 loan collections, consisting of relics and specimens taken from various mounds, mounted in standard exhibits cases, will be kept in circulation among the schools that listen in on the broadcasts.

THAT fame and fortune have come to the great advertisers. Their products have become a part of the life of the world. Continuous advertising of quality has brought the good-will which has made these concerns what they are today. To be a success any business must have the good-will of the people it serves. Good-will is obtained by keeping customers satisfied. It is a well known fact that continuous advertisers give full value for money spent and by so doing keep their customers satisfied. Continuous advertising makes a strong appeal to the pocket-book; so strong that it creates the necessary desire to possess. BUMPER APPLE CROP
OTTAWA, Can. — Early in October hundreds of persons will be busy in the commercial orchards of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, and British Columbia and this year there is a bumper crop to pick. The latest official estimate issued in September 1931 placed the total commercial production in Canada for 1931 at 3,654,000 barrels or 225,000 more than in 1930 and 363,216 barrels more than the five year average crop 1926-30. Of this year's crop Nova Scotia will account for 1,423,000 barrels; British Columbia, 1,146,000; Ontario, 861,000; Quebec, 169,000 and New Brunswick 55,000.

25 STUDENTS RAISE AVERAGE OF 275 BUSHELS POTATOES

MARIETTA, O. — Twenty-five vocational agriculture students at Marietta raised an average of over 275 bushels of potatoes to the acre in their project work this summer and were unusually successful in marketing their crop cooperatively.

Through their Future Farmer Organization they also assisted 75 other growers in the community in making good records, according to H. B. Van der Pool, agriculture instructor at Marietta high school.

The high school boys and cooperating growers have just completed marketing 12,000 bushels of potatoes which were graded in accordance with United States standards. Grading machines were bought by the Future Farmers and were hauled from farm to farm on a trailer. The greater part of the crop was marketed through a local cooperative organization.

Estimating that growers received a net increase of from 15 to 20 cents per bushel due to the grading and cooperative marketing, Van der Pool said this increase in returns to growers would be $1,800.

The Marietta boys attribute their high average yield of over 275 bushels per acre on their one to two acre projects to the fact that they carried out all of these improved practices.

The highest yield of 365 bushels per acre was obtained by Gale Ridgeway, a sophomore in Marietta high school. The average yield per acre of potatoes in Ohio is about 95 bushels.

Dr. Ray Fife, state supervisor of vocational agriculture, states that 735 high school agriculture students in the state who raised 682 acres of potatoes last year made a total labor income of $14,985. This figure represents the total returns to the boys for their labor after deducting all expenses including seed, fertilizer, spray materials, horse labor, rent on land and interest on investment.

In order to show a good profit the potato grower must carry out the practices followed by the Marietta boys, and secure good seed, plow, under legumes, fertilize heavily, spray, grade and market with efficiency.

In Washington Co. most of the adult growers attended part-time or evening courses.

In the end they found potatoes to be very profitable on their farms, and that the high yields per acre more than compensated for the comparatively low market prices obtained this year.

NEWS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE

HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

The director of education has the power, in proper cases, to vary the amount contributed per pupil to the various school districts from the state appropriation for the maintenance of special classes for physically handicapped children, subject to limitations fixed by statute. Attorney General Gilbert Bettman has ruled in an opinion to B. O. Skinner, director of education.

CHURCH CEMETERIES

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman in an opinion to I. K. Saltsman, Carrollton, Prosecution of Carroll-co, has held that township trustees have no authority to grant temporary financial aid to church organizations for the care and maintenance of cemeteries belonging to such church organizations.

General Bettman's opinion explained that since the offices of township trustees are created by statute, the trustees are necessary limited in their power to such matters as are clearly and expressly granted by statute, or necessarily implied for the purpose of carrying out the express powers granted. Since there is no provision of law authorizing the expenditure of township money for such purpose, it may not lawfully be done, the opinion held.

COMBINING COURTS

The question of combining the probate court and the court of common pleas of a county may not be submitted to the electors of a county at the November 1931 election. Attorney General Gilbert Bettman has held in an opinion to Cedric W. Clark, Pomeroy, prosecutor of Meigs-co.

BUILDING AND LOAN RECEIVERSHIPS

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman has filed a petition in the Supreme Court of Ohio for a writ of prohibition against the court of common pleas of Franklin-co in the Columbus Building and Loan Association receivership case to restrain courts of common pleas from appointing receivers except at the instance of the state superintendent of building and loan associations.

Regarding this action, Attorney General Bettman explained: "This action is brought for the protection of the members and depositors in building and loan associations of Ohio. What the action seeks is a ruling from the Supreme Court which will place a protecting arm around building and loan associations of the state and prevent them from being subject to random attempts at unauthorized receiverships. If the Supreme Court allows the writ, courts of common pleas in Ohio will be without authority to appoint receivers except where proper proceedings are brought at the instance of the state superintendent of building and loan associations. This will make the practice in building and loan association matters conform substantially to the practice in state and national bank matters."

Hearing on the case was held Tuesday, September 29th.

VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman has held in an opinion to Calvin Crawford, Dayton, prosecutor of Montgomery-co, that when territory lying outside the corporate limits of a city, but which was included in the city school district incorporates itself into a village, such village will become a village school district, providing it has a tax duplicate of not less than $500,000. Crawford's inquiry related to certain territory which is a part of the Dayton city school district, but which is outside of the corporate limits. One community in this territory desires to incorporate itself into a village, less by so doing it loses its right to be a part of the Dayton school district, he said.

How Much Would You Pay to Be Rid of Rheumatic Pains In 48 Hours?

Would You Pay Ten Dollars? — Would You Pay 85 Cents?

Well: Here's a chance for you to be spry once more—to do your work cheerfully without one twinge of pain.

Here's a positive guarantee that no rheumatism sufferer can afford to pass up—you can be free from agonizing rheumatism—and keep free from it.

Get one 85 cent bottle of Allenru from Hamilton & Ryan or any progressive druggist with the positive and distinct understanding that your pains and torture will all be gone in 48 hours or money back.

And when pains are gone—keep right on taking Allenru "till every bit of harmful uric acid is out of your body. Happiness comes with this wonderful prescription—thousands know it—you ought to know it. —Adv.

In holding that such incorporation would automatically create a village school district, General Bettman explained:

"There is a clear implication in the language of the statute that the intention of the legislature was that a village created from territory other than that included within a rural school district should become a separate village school district as well as those villages created from territory embraced within a rural school district."

KEEP SCHOOLS OPEN

Boards of education must use every possible lawful means to maintain the schools of its district for at least 32 weeks in every school year, but if instances arise where no funds are available to pay for operating the schools, no liability will attach to the board members personally in the absence of fraud, Attorney General Gilbert Bettman held in a recent opinion to B. O. Skinner, director of education.

General Bettman traced the history of public education in Ohio from the ordinance of 1787 which provided:

"Religion, morality, and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

The opinion also cites a provision in the Ohio Constitution of 1902 embodying the same thought. The laws of Ohio make it mandatory for children of school age to attend school and require that parents shall see that their children attend school, the opinion set forth.

"Notwithstanding the positive commands of the Constitution and the laws of this state, instances arise, such as the one in question, where the way to open schools may not seem clear and where considerable difficulty is experienced in doing so. In spite of this difficulty, however, every effort should be made within the range of human possibility to open the schools and maintain them as provided by law," General Bettman said in his opinion.

CASH POSITION OF INDUSTRIES IS STRONGER THAN IN 1927

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 1.—Although of business from existing conditions in the price average, the cash position of 60 leading American industrial corporations on June 30, 1931, was stronger than during the 1927-28 depression period and only 14 per cent below the 1920 peak. These figures and comparisons were obtained from the monthly report of the final conditions of these concerns issued by the Midland bank of Cleveland.

A chart depicting the trend of cash and marketable security holdings of the selected companies shows them to have had $269,000,000 in cash and $124,000,000 in marketable securities, or a total of $393,000,000 available assets, on June 30. At the peak in 1925, this total reached only $456,000,000, and the four-year average during the first post-war depression period was $322,000,000.

The review pointed out, however, that the 1931 decline has been more than offset by the fall in the price level average which reduces the amount of cash necessary for current expenses.

"These large cash surpluses form a great reservoir of funds, part of which can be used for constructive purposes when the opportunity arises," said D. C. Elliott, the bank's economist and author of the chart.

Such a translation of cash savings into constructive spending, according to Elliott, would form another step to assist the recovery ment in the shift and in the methods of deception. With the one-second rule momentum no longer is possible but there are appreciable advantages in spacing for blocking that can be gained in a cleverly devised shift not discernible to the defense. There also are possibilities in the lateral pass that are worth working out.

"The game of today is far more interesting to the spectator than the play of forty years ago, and now that football has been evolved, there will be few changes in the rules to confuse the public."

"I think that the popularity of the game will continue unabated, although the tendency of many people to be interested only in games involving unbeaten teams has been noticeable in recent seasons."

RULING ON DOGS A ruling from J. W. Thompson, conservation commissioner, states that owners of dogs are not permitted to run their animals during the night season for the period from Oct. 15 to Nov. 14. No dogs whatever will be allowed to roam or run in the woods and fields in this period.

It is during this time that most of the green furs are taken, according to conservation officers.

Wage Cuts

IN November, 1929, President Hoover called a conference of industrialists and business men at the white house. Under his urging they agreed that for an indefinite period they would not initiate general wage reductions.

The last tattered remnants of that solemn agreement were torn up when the big steel corporations put into effect a wage cut. Other industries had begun reducing wages almost before the white house agreement was cold, and the steel industry had kept up an artificial appearance of complying with it by such subterfuge as "staggering" employment. All in all it proved merely a scrap of paper.

Naturally the president and his advisers were disappointed and shocked. Had they succeeded in "stabilizing" the pay envelope, it would have been a master stroke for the administration. But economic laws cannot be abrogated to suit political exigencies and social theories.

True, it is, that mass production would be disastrous without equivalent mass consumption, that high wages are essential to maintain buying power. But it is also true that labor costs must be kept in line with commodity prices, especially when prices are being pared down, as a last resort to stimulate business.

The 40 per cent wage cut in the steel industry does not make the prospect completely black. Ten years ago a wage cut in this industry signified the beginning of a new era of prosperity. Nor will the present cut work great hardships upon the steel workers and those with whom they do business if they get a full week's work along with the cut.

Back to Feathers

THERE is a cause and effect relationship between history, economic and fashion that is not as finely drawn as many suppose. This relationship exists itself in the everyday affairs of life and so subtly that it often escapes detection. Moreover, it is frequently extended to other factors or elements.

This relationship is patent in the Empress Eugenie hat. History, the history of the Second Empire, was its inspiration; Twentieth century susceptibility to every shift in the winds of fashion permitted it and the ostrich farnas benefited from it. Here is the chain without a link missing.

The stage was all set for the queer but very chic and tricky little plumb-decked derbies. Having been a creation of an age when grace of body rather than of mind was the object of a young girl's education, it would have been incongruous while short skirts and straight lines were still in vogue. Fashions may be freakish at times but they are never unharmonious.

Nor would ostrich feathers have been restored to favor had not improvements have been made in the automobile since they went out of favor. They originally lost out when the advent of the automobile made wind-proof millinery essential. Popularization of the closed car removed this objection to the filmy feathers.

So prosperity came back to the ostrich farmers and feather business and will remain with them until history or economics or mechanics or fashion - or all four of them - decree that feathers are out.

All World's a Diamond

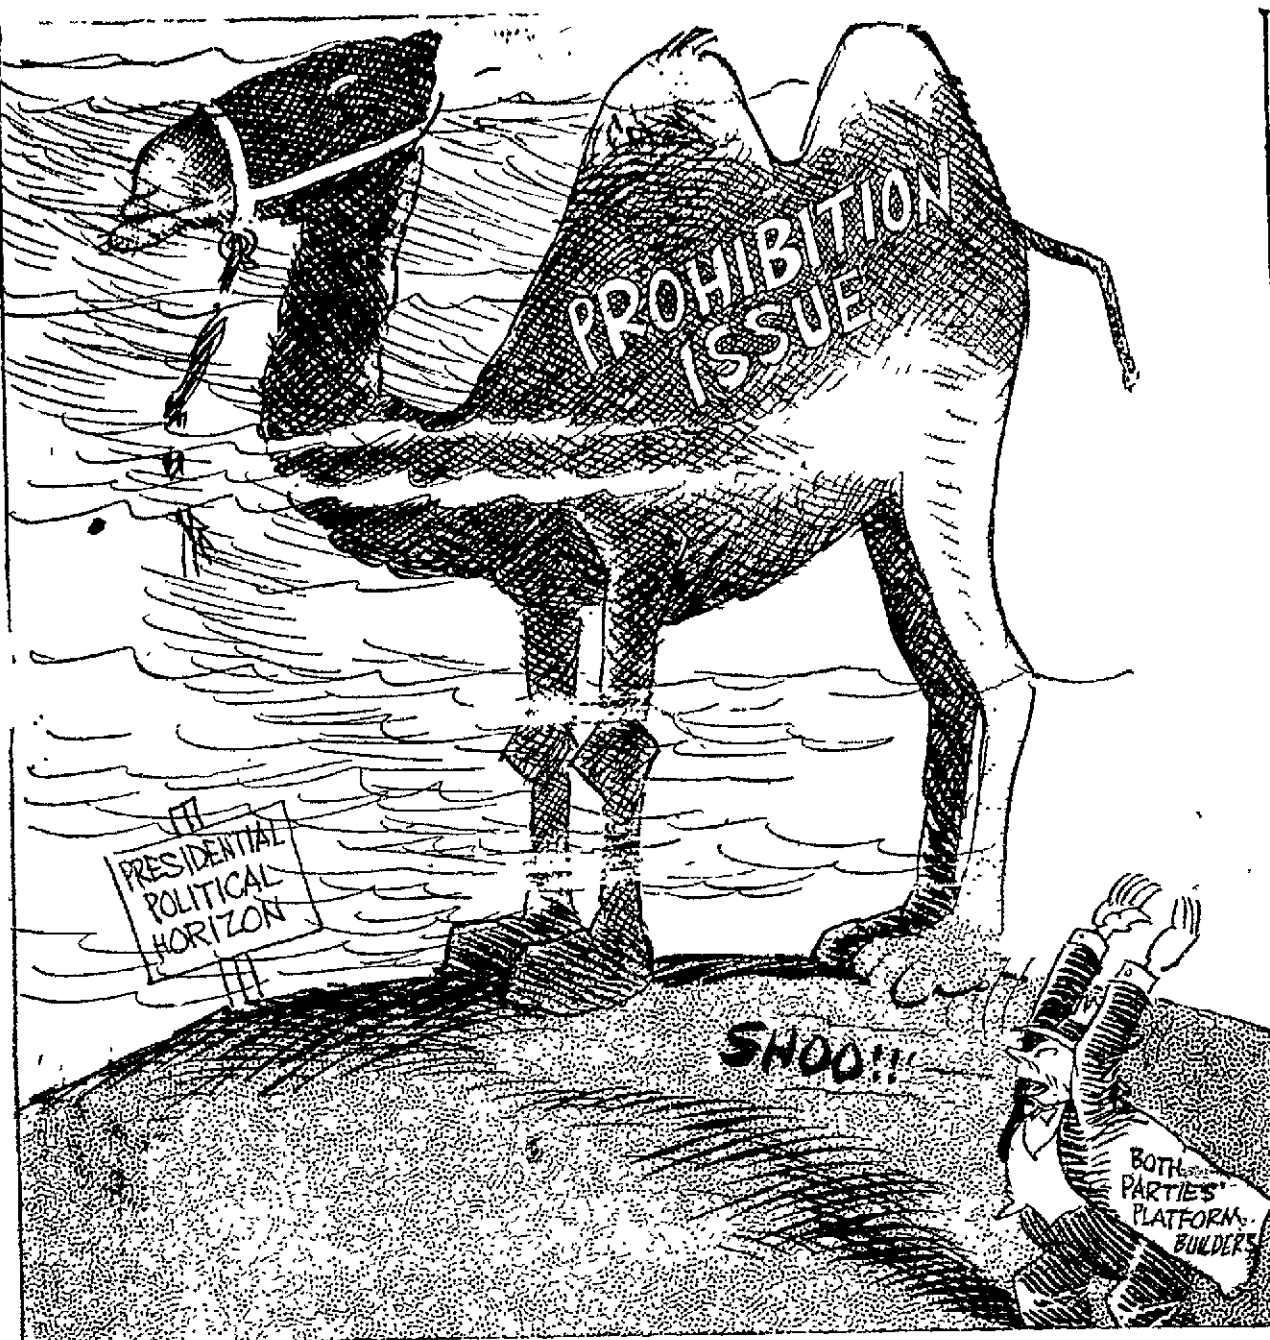

ALL the world's a diamond and all the men and women merely jans now that the titanic struggle for the world's baseball championship has started. It is ever thus when autumn's units are on the leaves and work becomes burdensome during the latter half of the afternoon.

To baseball followers in every part of the United States the playing of the world series typifies all the superlatives of perfection in the great national pastime, and their interest in the series never wanes until the final decision is rendered.

It matters not whether the fans live in the cities whose teams are clashing for baseballdom's stellar honors or whether they have their habitat in even the most isolated of villages, the same keen, enthusiastic interest is all-pervading. Baseball truly can be termed the great American sport, and the number of participants who engage in the playing of it some time or other during the season is far in excess of the number indulging in any other form of athletic diversion. It is a clean, wholesome sport and no better finale could be given to the season's windup than the playing of the world series.

Looks like often deceiving. No auto is over 20 years old.

OCCUPYING CONSIDERABLE SPACE

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT BY COVIEL, FRIEDL, INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

On Christmas Eve young and pretty Geraldine Foster disappeared from the office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, where she was employed. Mrs. Morgan, Maskell's neighbor, corroborates his statement that he distributed gifts with her daughter that afternoon. Geraldine had broken her engagement with Harry Armstrong. It is also learned that the mysterious Ephraim Foster, who had written Geraldine, is a woman. A black-mail note, presumably written by the missing girl, leads Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt to a deserted house on Peddler's Road. Outside a window he finds seven dead, blood-stained persons. The interior of the house is topsyturvy. Colt comes upon a bloody axe and a strand of blond hair. Betty Canfield, Geraldine's roommate, identifies the body of a nude woman found buried a short distance away as that of the missing girl. A pillow case covers the head. Although the surrounding ground is dry, the grave contains a pine-scented fluid. The medical examiner states she was dead not more than 36 hours. Two bottles, similar to those seen carried away from the doctor's office by two women the day of the disappearance, are found near the grave. Colt learns that Geraldine's inheritance from her father will now go to her brother, Bruce. A letter found in the dead girl's apartment fits the Peddler's Road house.

CHAPTER XVII.
ELL, Tony, if you are looking for motives for the murder, you have two now."
"Two, Chief? I don't get you."
"Yes. There is the possibility of the Virginian motive."
"Virginian?"
"Yes—the father who places such store on chastity that he would kill a violated daughter. Rare in these days—but you have heard Edmund L. Foster speak twice for himself."
"I hadn't thought of that—it doesn't sound reasonable—and yet—"
"Ah, yes, Tony! There is always that and yet!"
"But the other motive?"
"Defiant Young Man."

"Bruce Foster might have killed the girl to get her share of the inheritance. He would not be the first brother to do such a thing."
"That is a horrible thought—a brother to kill a sister for money?"
"Instead of replying, my chief told me to bring Bruce Foster in to the office."
The young man who stalked in so boldly was tall and thin but he looked strong. He had sandy hair, ruddy complexion and challenging blue eyes. In his very walk there was an air of truculence as if he were determined to prove to the world that he was not afraid of it. As the door swung shut behind him, he thrust forward his head, exposing his teeth and said to Thatcher Colt:
"This is a deuce of a way to treat white people," said Bruce. And would not answer. After watching him for a moment in silence, Thatcher Colt suddenly rose and passed behind the screen. When he emerged, he fixed Bruce Foster with a glance.
"Bruce, I had one report on you from Betty Canfield. She used to like you. But she broke her engagement with you. She said you used to be a fine fellow, but you turned into a hellion, a good-for-nothing fellow, all at once. Hitting the booze pretty hard. Almost lost your job as an accountant out at Millbrook. Now don't sit there like a churl and refuse to talk to me. Didn't you take to drinking because you believed your sister was leading an immoral life?"
As Bruce looked up at the Commissioner, his face was like a commiseration in a medical painting.
"What has that to do with the murder?" he asked.
But Thatcher Colt was relentless.
"Does that refresh your memory?" he asked, and tossed the key on the glass top of the desk, which it fell with a ringing sound.
At the sight of the key, a young man's face remained impassive. Thatcher Colt bent over him, his two hands seizing the shoulders firmly.
"Whose key is that? To those doors?" he demanded.
Bruce Foster shut his eyes to avoid the commanding stare of Thatcher Colt's sombre eyes. He clasped his hands together and moved his feet back and forth restlessly.
"I never saw it before," he declared.
"All right," said Thatcher Colt, pushing the key aside. "Tell me where you went to look for your sister."
"It was just a fool," said Bruce bitterly. "I've got a bad temper and I know it. But I will tell you all about it. I knew that things hadn't been going well between Gerry and the fellow she was going to marry. The wedding was almost here and the nearer it came the more miserable she seemed. But she wouldn't tell me what the trouble was, nor pop, nor nigh. She would make it up with Harry and everything would be all right and then the next time we saw her she was sad and blue. On Christmas Eve I was in New York and I called her up. I was going to take her home with me for Christmas. But she was crying over the

"You thought your sister was having an affair. You didn't want your father to know. So you started to settle the matter for yourself. Whom did you think she had an affair with?"
The ruddy cheeks of the young man turned pale.
"Who told you that?" he demanded.
"I guessed it," said Thatcher Colt truthfully. "Whom did you suspect, Bruce?"
The boy shrugged his shoulders. "You guessed wrong," he answered stubbornly.
"Where did you go when you wouldn't tell your father and mother where you would search for your sister?" insisted Thatcher Colt.
The boy turned his eyes away.

Guesswork.

"I guessed it," said Thatcher Colt truthfully. "Whom did you suspect, Bruce?"
The boy shrugged his shoulders. "You guessed wrong," he answered stubbornly.

Sleep Is Essential to Continued Good Health

Dr. Copeland Explodes the Belief That Great Thinkers, Men of Genius and Old Folks Require Less Sleep; Urges a Full Quota of Rest Each Day.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MOST visitors to great cities complain that they can't sleep. Of course, a good many of them are so busy there are few hours left for sleep.

Out-of-town-ers are apt to wonder how "city folks" can get along with so little sleep. The fact is the natives are in good long before he visitors even think of retiring. The activities of a big city are most alluring to those who "cannot" indulge in them at home. Yet there is no doubt that most city dwellers do not get the same number of hours of sleep as do our cousins in the country.

Sleep is extremely important to health. Health cannot be maintained for any long period of time without an abundance of rest.

Colgate University recently made a survey of the sleeping habits of over five hundred men of distinction. It was learned that the average number of hours of sleep was from seven and one half to eight hours. Twelve hundred questionnaires were sent out and the fact that most of them answered, shows the widespread realization of the importance of sleep. Among the men questioned were governors, writers, generals, playwrights, doctors, college presidents, judges and other extremely busy men.

There is a tradition that great thinkers and men of genius get along with very little sleep. There is an old theory that five hours of sleep is plenty, and that old folks need much less sleep than younger people. Neither of these common beliefs is true.

Five Hours Not Sufficient.
Old, as well as young, require sufficient sleep. Five hours are not enough to give an active mind and body adequate rest.

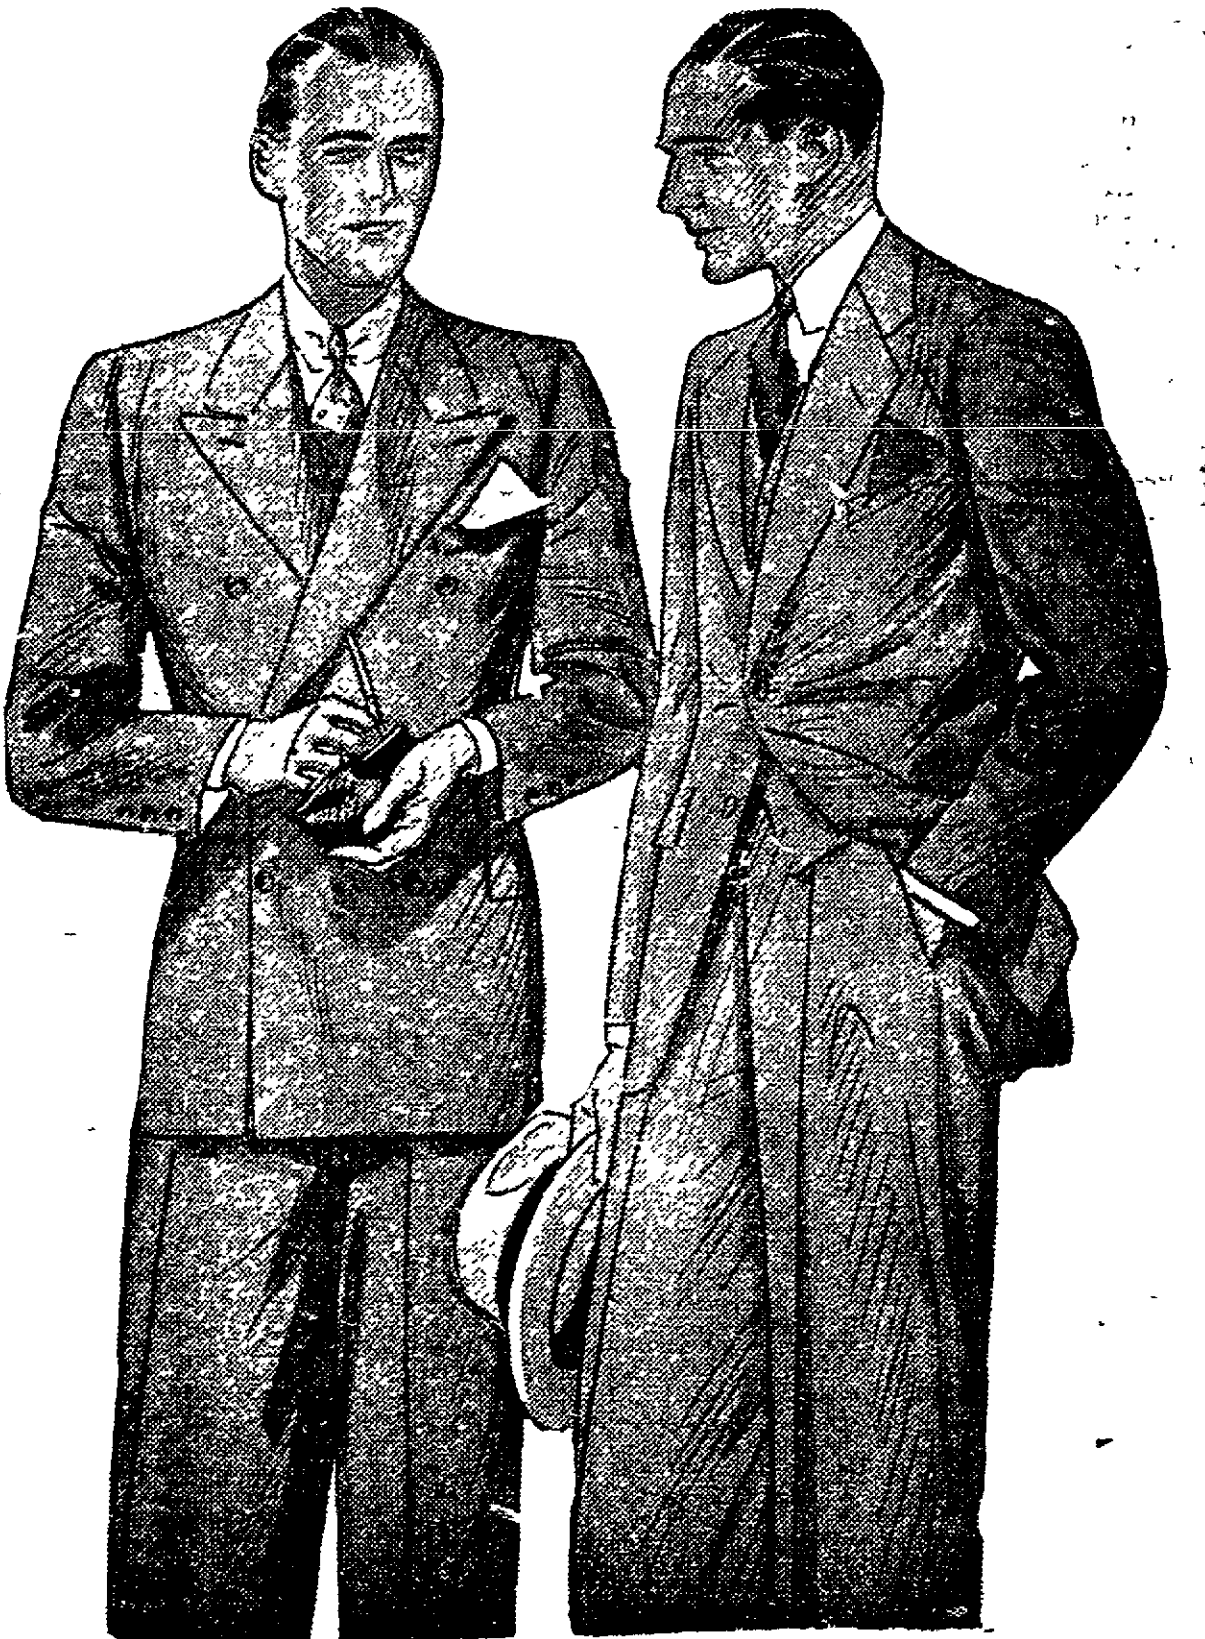

Many persons are eager to sleep, yet cannot go to sleep. This may occur after a difficult day, particularly if much nerve strain and energy have been consumed. Many methods have been suggested to encourage sleep.

The least harmful of all methods of inducing sleep is to take a warm drink or hot "ath just before going to bed. This method of obtaining relaxation is usually successful. I will tell you more on another occasion.

Dr. Copeland

Tigers Meet Grandview Bobcats Friday At 3

TWO REGULARS WATCH FRACAS FROM SIDELINE

Bill Heggie and George Iles Out With Injuries; Rooney To Start.

Circleville high school's Tigers, crippled by the loss of two regulars through injuries, will meet their first Central Buckeye league opponents of the season on the local gridiron Friday afternoon. The game is to start at 3 o'clock.

Announcement was made Thursday by Coach Pete Herberholz that Bill Heggie, center, and George Iles, halfback, both veterans and towers of strength, will watch the game from the sidelines. Heggie has a cracked rib and Iles a badly cut hand. Paul Rooney, who played good ball at a guard the greater part of the Lancaster game, will go to center. It has not been determined who will play Iles' position.

Merle Davis, who was handicapped in the Lancaster game by a bruised shoulder, has been rapidly rounding into form and is almost certain to start. Charles Davis, colored lad, a freshman, has looked good in practice and will probably see some service in the backfield. Dean White has been coming along rapidly and with Bob Hundley will again be used in the backfield. Whether Dutch Hoffman will be pulled into the backfield from his tackle berth is not known but since Iles' injury it is expected he will be. That will put Frank Dunlap and Med Good at the tackle.

Officials for the contest are Rodney Ross of Columbus and Jake Snouffer of Chillicothe.

Probable lineups are:

Purcell re Taylor
Dunlap rt Keller
Stout rg Corcoran

Battles Mellon

Representative Wright Patman (above), Democrat, of Texas, has reiterated his intention of bringing impeachment proceedings against Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon when Congress convenes. Representative Patman cites the law that bans a Secretary of the Treasury from being interested in trade and commerce, either directly or indirectly. Mellon is said by Patman to have violated his oath.

CONNIE ENDS OVER-CONFIDENCE IN CAMP, STAR CATCHER CLAIMS

Failure to Win Latest Exhibition Games Blamed on Lack of Competitive Feeling, Mickey Cochrane Says in Interview Before Big Series Begins; Team is Keyed Up He Says.

BY MICKEY COCHRANE
(Catcher Philadelphia Athletics.)
Copyright, 1931, By International News Service.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—Anyone who has read and believed the reports that the Philadelphia Athletics entered today's opening world's series with the St. Louis Cardinals in an over-confident fashion is mistaken. We're in our best fighting mood. Connie Mack has seen to this.

We have a very peculiar ball club. A fighting machine in important and crucial games, we have a tendency to let down completely when the contests on hand are exhibition affairs or don't mean anything. Take the games last Sunday with the New York Yankees and Monday with the Phillies. We just couldn't work ourselves into the fighting pitch so paramount in games where our prestige and position are at stake.

When we scored but one run in 18 innings against the Yanks and Phils, critics and fans were quick to claim we were taking the world series games with the Cardinals too lightly, that we were holding the team we had trounced last year too cheaply and therefore this mental attitude would reflect on our game and give the Cardinals a psychological edge. Maybe we didn't look at our best in the last two games. There was something lacking in our attack. This I believe was due to our feeling that the games didn't matter. There was nothing at stake. Every ball player loves his base hits, but in exhibition games there's a tendency to be careless, to wait for the next ball instead of cranking the first good one over the plate.

Connie Mack sensed the indifference in our playing, particularly in the charity game with the Phillies. It was our last game before meeting the Cards and Mack had hoped we could be aroused to the keen mental edge so desirous on the eve of championship contests. He was disappointed in us and the next morning at a social meeting in the clubhouse told us without mincing words:

I've listened to a number of dressing room talks by football coaches, and I've heard the best of political orators endeavor to arouse the feelings of a crowd before election, but not one can equal Connie Mack as a straight-from-the-shoulder speaker. He hit straight on, and though he refers from ever mentioning an individual player's name in his talks there can be no doubt as to the man he's referring to.

This talk was what we needed. It was a wake-up call to what we have done to ourselves in the Athletics. It was a wake-up call to what we have done to ourselves in the Athletics. It was a wake-up call to what we have done to ourselves in the Athletics.

We are now entering this morning's game with the Cardinals.

President, National Football League

(Written Especially For and Copyrighted, 1931, By International News Service)

NEW YORK—The popularity of professional football today can be traced to the National Football League's "hands-off" policy in regard to collegiate stars who have not completed their academic courses.

In the early days of the unorganized "pro" game there was a wild scramble to sign outstanding college stars. Some of these boys "jumped" their schools and did not complete their education. As a result ill feeling arose between college authorities and the league.

Owners of professional teams no longer raid the college ranks, and today a fine spirit of co-operation exists between the "pros" and college authorities.

As president of the National Football League, I have contended from the beginning that under no conditions should professional football interfere with the college game.

So far has the National League gone into this matter that it has a rule which prohibits a player from signing a league contract until his class at college has graduated. This prevents a boy from jumping his college team, for he cannot play in the National League until such time as he would have finished his entire career with his college eleven.

Another rule prohibits the signing of players who have been guilty while attending school of any discreditable conduct, pertaining either to his football playing or otherwise.

College officials now are convinced that the professionals are not attempting to break down college football but are doing everything they can to build it up. In fact, many college coaches take their entire teams to witness professional games so that their chance can see the "post graduate" game.

The culture of football in the league has improved from year to year. At the present time the number of stars, the fine team work and the general ability of the teams in the National League are coming to be recognized as standards for the sport in this country. In the lineup of the various league teams will be found almost every college star of any note in the past two or three years.

The National Football League, which started out with fourteen clubs in 1921, has been reduced to ten teams this year. Two of the last year's eleven clubs have been dropped and one new one—Cleveland—has been added. Cleveland's home games are played in the city's new $3,000,000 stadium on the Lake front.

Entrance of many outstanding collegiate stars of 1931 into the professional field has kept the interest of the fans in the pro's alive. Several teams have been strengthened by the addition of these newcomers and will furnish stiff opposition to the Green Bay eleven, champions for the past two years.

FUTURE FOOTBALL TO CHANGE LITTLE SAYS COACH STAGG

CHICAGO—No major changes in the game of football are likely in the future, Coach A. A. Staggs of the University of Chicago declared as he looked over his men as his fortieth season as mentor was getting under way.

The Chicago coach made this statement with a background of nearly fifty years' association with the game, as a player at Yale and as a coach at Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A., college and at Chicago.

In that half century Staggs has seen one of the factors in making football the leading college sport. "I think that the major sport."

Late Rally Wins For Spartan '11'

UNIVERSAL STADIUM, Portsmouth, N. H.—(Sp.) After battling the Spartans through the first half, Portsmouth Spartans came from behind in the fourth quarter to register a 14 to 6 win over Red Cagle's strong New York Giant eleven here Wednesday night.

It was the river city's third victory in the National Football League in as many starts and the first defeat of the team in the Giants. New York scored during the opening minutes of the third quarter on an advance which began on Portsmouth's 20-yard line and ended when Moran caught Flanniken's pass and ran 11 yards for a touchdown.

Presnell, former all-American from Nebraska, tied the score in the fourth period numbering 14 yards for a touchdown after a pass to Peterson. Spartan substitute end, had advanced the ball deep into Giant territory. Presnell's first try for point was while both teams were offside. Clark's attempt sailed squarely through the upright to make it 7 to 6. Portsmouth scored again when Wager intercepted one of Flanniken's tosses and ran out of bounds on New York's 4-yard line. Clark carried the ball across and kicked goal.

Clark's beautiful punting, which averaged 47 yards kept the Giants in hot water and nullified most of the nice going chalked up by Cagle, Wycoff and Kitzmiller. Cagle was pretty well covered most of the time by the Spartan wingmen.

Starting the fourth quarter with the ball on Portsmouth's 47-yard mark, Clark punted out-of-bounds on New York's 18. Two exchanges of punts gave Portsmouth the ball on the 35-yard line from where the Spartans advanced to New York's 24-yard marker on a series of line bucks and a long pass to Peterson. The crowd went wild when Presnell, a few plays later dashed over for the tying score and Clark sewed things up with his place-kick for point.

Cagle and Wycoff headed two Giant advances which were nipped short when Portsmouth's line braced after Clark kicked out of bounds on New York's 1-yard line. The visitors sought to snatch victory with an overhead attack. Wager stopped it, catching a toss which almost fell in Cagle's hands and scrambled back to New York's 40-yard line where he was run outside. Clark bucked center and

Prejudice

TO ASK a man or woman to be unprejudiced, unbiased and open-minded is to ask next to the impossible. We all have our likes and dislikes, our opinions and beliefs, our desires and purposes. This human trait is what keeps the world in a constant state of debate and conflict. Without it there would be no human progress.

The American jury has afforded an excellent opportunity to observe the prejudices and partisanship of Americans. Public sentiment on the prohibition question is being reflected daily in verdicts returned by juries in Volstead act violations. In those counties where "dry" feeling is strong indicted liquor law violators are receiving no quarter at the hands of jurors. In "wet" sections of the country conviction of prohibition violators has been found next to impossible. Legislatures make the laws, executives say they must be enforced, but the prejudices and opinions of men and women in the jury boxes determine if they are enforced.

There has been a remarkable change in jury sentiment on the now waning conflict between the pedestrian and the motorist. When the automobile was "impractical and a public menace" and automobile owners represented only an infinitesimal part of the whole population pedestrian juries conscientiously believed a pedestrian could do no wrong and so invariably gave him the advantage in automobile damage suits. The balance of representation in the jury box has since shifted to the automobile owner or user and the pedestrian seeking "exemplary and punitive damages" from the owner of the automobile which rolled him under "wheel must account for his being on the right-of-way of the motor vehicle. Juries are not intentionally partial, but it is so much easier for humanity to see its side of the issue.

Just now only an idealist could conceive of a civilization in which all men would weigh both sides of every question without error.

The Hours After Supper

MOST careers are made or marred in hours after supper. It may seem to some that the few hours after supper and bed time afford small opportunity for education. But there were sufficient for Lincoln and for Franklin and for millions of men who by turning these hours to advantage through special studies advanced themselves above their fellows.

"Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of." Benjamin Franklin, who said this, not only understood the value of time, but he put a price on it that made others appreciate its worth.

Bradstreet's in a summary of business conditions ascribes most business failures to what may be called "the size of their scrap-heaps." Nothing is more inexcusable and disastrous than waste, and the most disastrous waste of all is waste of time. The unusual hours form the "scrap-heap" that has wrecked many a man's career.

That heap of waste which so many young men dump at the end of every day and consider useless would, if rightly used, give priceless results in increased efficiency, higher service and better pay.

Ambition, resolve, effort, purpose, persistency, confidence, courage, mental equipment and success may be manufactured out of this heap of waste time. Millions are doing it. Any man can who will.

Many highly educated people are inefficient, and many efficient people are not highly educated. The world calls for educated people who are efficient and efficient people who are educated. Most of all is needed education for efficiency, for service.

Real service is not so much the learning of what we do not know as the doing of what we do not now do.

Long Life

THERE used to be considerable doubt whether it was possible for a human being to live for a century. Reports of centenarians were not convincing to all people with a taste for statistics and documentary evidence. That doubt, however has been pretty well swept away. Recently there have been a lot of news items about people alive or departed from life at anywhere from one hundred to one hundred and thirty years of age.

It will be observed however that practically all of these instances of extreme longevity have to do with people living simple plain uneventful lives, so far removed from the world of action and progress that no attention is paid to them until their death. Really, is a long life so greatly desired when it can be said that most important part of it is its end?

SPIKED!

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT BY COWLEY, FRIED, INC., — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

The nude, hacked body of Geraldine Foster is found buried a short distance from the Peddler's Road house. The grave is filled with pine-scented fluid, and nearby are two bottles similar to that found in the office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, Geraldine's employer. Two women were seen leaving the doctor's office carrying similar bottles. Colt picks up a blond hair at the scene of the crime. Mrs. Morgan, a neighbor, corroborates the doctor's statement that he was with her daughter the day of the disappearance. He claims a strange woman was waiting outside his office when he returned. Other suspects are Geraldine's brother, Bruce, who is to inherit her estate, and Harry Armstrong, the victim's former fiancé. Armstrong states he phoned Geraldine from Hartford, the night before she disappeared, to suggest they elope, but she refused. Colt learns that Bruce Foster is an adopted child, whose father was hung for murder. It is believed, however, that Mr. Foster is the boy's real father. Mrs. Habern, owner of the Peddler's Road house, identifies Dr. Maskell as her tenant. "Mr. Bigsbee," Maskell tells of receiving a phone call from Geraldine on January 5th, ten days after her disappearance, saying she was in trouble and requesting him to meet her. She failed to keep the appointment. The doctor denies taking her to Peddler's Road.

CHAPTER XXII. OCTOBER. "The Commissioner, 'do you realize that you are in a nasty fix right about now?'" Maskell drew himself up with dignity.

"Will you tell me what my property on Peddler's Road has to do with all this?"

"Did you keep an axe on that place?"

"An axe?"

"Yes—a short handled axe, with a double blade."

"Why, yes, certainly, yes, I did."

"What did you use the axe for, Doctor Maskell?"

"Nothing else."

"What else?"

"Some one used it for something else, Doctor."

"I am not good at enigmas."

"Doctor Maskell, this is a fact—Geraldine Foster was murdered, hacked to pieces and the crime was done in your house and with your axe."

"Circumstantial Evidence"

Doctor Maskell leaped to his feet. If he was acting it was magnificent.

"This is a trick," he shouted.

"You are trying to scare me."

"For mercy, Thatcher Colt thrust near the man's face a photograph of the girl, and, owing the girl's nude body still in the grave."

All laughter was wiped away from the doctor's broad mouth as he gazed at the print lying flat on his hand.

"Poor Geraldine," he muttered.

"You're green, stronger, his face crimson as he turned on the Commissioner. 'Who was the monster that would commit a crime like that—and on my property, my little girl?'"

"Neither mind," he snapped.

"Thatcher Colt. You must realize now that you have a lot to explain."

"When was she killed?" gasped Doctor Maskell, looking strangely around the room.

"I am asking the questions, Doctor."

"It does not matter. I shall prove my innocence."

"If you can do that, fine—in the face of what we can bring against you."

"Nevertheless," cried Doctor Maskell, "you will be unable to bring a single witness to place me on the scene of the murder. And surely some one will come forward to bear me out that I waited at the entrance to Bronx Park for a girl I believed to be alive! I am not afraid!"

As he was speaking, the door was opening, and a patrolman stamped in with a sheaf of notes. Colt received them with unconcealed eagerness.

The Autopsy

"Just a moment," he murmured. "These are the reports from the eight autopsies."

"Eight?" exclaimed Dougherty. "What do you mean—eight?"

"One girl and seven pigeons," explained Colt. "Ah, and here is Doctor Multooler himself."

The Assistant Medical Examiner nodded wearily as he stood just within the door and wiped his glasses.

"How long had those pigeons been dead, Multooler?"

"At least ten days, sir," replied the Assistant Medical Examiner.

"The girl was supposed to be dead ten days, but the pigeons were dead ten days, eh?"

"Well, sir, we don't suppose that any more."

"The autopsy changed your opinion?"

"Yes, it did," replied the Examiner. "Somebody tried to fool us. The girl had also been killed about ten days ago."

Thatcher Colt's face was very serious then, and he did not look at Doctor Maskell.

"Was there any food in her stomach?"

"Yes, sir."

"About how far digested?"

"Not more than five hours."

Thatcher Colt glanced around in brief accusing triumph.

"Then Geraldine Foster unquestionably met her death about five o'clock on the afternoon of December 24," he declared feelingly.

"Yes, sir."

"Thanks, Multooler."

"Yes—Sir."

"Now what did the chemist find in that bottle of water we took from the grave?"

"Tannic acid! Of course! Made from the bark of pine trees! Used in tanning leather, Dougherty. Tannic acid—that's what preserved the body. A clumsy trick! And an old one! It was used in the David S. Paul case, out in Tabernacle, New Jersey, but the police solved it in twenty-four hours. Why should this killer try that trick again?"

The Commissioner closed his eyes and remained silent. But Dougherty could seldom remain silent, and this was not one of the times.

"Colt," he exploded, in exasperation, "what in the name of Jesse James and the Seven Sisters are you taking me to about? Gosh, doesn't the District Attorney mount to anything?"

"Bourn here?"

"With a grateful smile, Thatcher Colt dismissed Multooler."

"It is very simple," he explained to the District Attorney. "Geraldine Foster was killed. Then she was put into a bath-tub filled with water loaded with tannic acid and that preserved the body."

"But why preserve the body?"

"It seems obvious enough. She was killed ten days ago, but she was buried in the last forty-eight hours."

"I see," cried Dougherty suddenly and loudly. Pushing back his chair, he stood up, pounding his red fist into his palm and striding back and forth. "It was a slick alibi!"

"Dougherty, you're marvelous!" chuckled Thatcher Colt.

Not for a moment did the District Attorney discern the sarcasm of his friend. His brain was rapidly sketching out to him the wonderful possibilities now just made clear to him.

"Why, it would be a perfect alibi," he repeated, glaring at Doctor Maskell.

"We are supposed to believe the murder took place during the last forty-eight hours. And, of course, the murderer hoped to account for his movements—I think he's been stringing us here anyway. He thought he would never be asked to show where he was when the murder was really committed. Well, this is the kind of a genius, Doctor Maskell—I'll leave it to you, only it didn't work."

"You're undoubtedly right, Mr. Dougherty," said Hogan.

"Bunk!" snorted Doctor Maskell.

The Commissioner laughed softly. It was like Dougherty, the hot-spur, to take another man's theory and in two minutes come to believe it was his very own.

"My dear Mr. Dougherty," said Doctor Maskell boldly, "don't you see that only a feeble-minded person would think of such a scheme as that?"

"Feeble-minded? I think you consider yourself a master mind," cried the District Attorney, of his next job is to find out who has bought a quantity of tannic acid recently."

Maskell ignored the last thrust. "The alibi would be no good for the murderer for the last 48 hours, unless he had an accomplice," he asserted. "Don't you realize somebody had to go up there and bury the body?"

"Well,"

"That's as serious as if he did the murder. He was on the scene! It would take as much time to bury the body as it did to kill it—maybe more. So, such an alibi would be worthless to me or anyone else."

"Without Proof"

But Dougherty was not to be outwitted by the calm reasoning of this baffling physician.

"Who would know about tannic acid, except you—a doctor? Who bought the muffer we found in the house? You—the doctor. By God, you're guilty."

Dougherty leaped frantically to his feet. "Of course you're guilty! You're guilty!"

"You can't prove it," replied the doctor with determined calm. "On Christmas Eve I was distributing gifts to my patients. I was accompanied by my chauffeur and title Doris Morgan, who lives upstairs. For Christmas Eve I have a perfect alibi."

"Good!" said Thatcher Colt, emphatically. "You have the right of the night to prove it."

A haggard look crept over the face of Maskell.

"The third degree for me, then?" he exclaimed, his eyes scanning the faces. Hogan nodded. Dougherty nodded. Maskell forced a chuckle that seemed compounded of defiance, confidence or else great malice. "I could not tell whether he was supremely big or supremely cowardly of himself."

X-Ray and Its Value to Medical Science

Dr. Copeland Tells of the Early Misconceptions Regarding the X-Ray and How Its Discovery Has Been Responsible for the Great Advance in Medicine

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ON November 8, 1895, after many trying, unsuccessful experiments, Dr. Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen discovered the X-ray. This discovery has enabled man to combat many diseases and to extend life when without it, it would have been impossible.

When this discovery was first announced there were all sorts of misconceptions regarding its nature and uses. People at first were under the impression that by means of a certain lens it would be possible to visualize anything and everything anywhere. In fact a bill was introduced in one of the State legislatures, proposing to prohibit the use of X-rays and opera glasses at the same time.

The medical profession quickly realized the tremendous value this new discovery offered in their work. At first, of course, not all the results obtained were gratifying. In fact, many physicians lost their lives as a result of continuous exposure to the X-ray. Their sacrifice for humanity has not been in vain, for today, only as a result of many years of experimentation, the X-ray is pretty well perfected. Under present day procedure, there is no danger, either to the patient or to the doctor in taking an X-ray.

At first the X-ray was used to locate foreign bodies in the body such as bullets and needles, and to study fractures of the bones. It is now used in every branch of medicine.

In dentistry, because of the teeth and infection of the jaw-bones, are immediately recognized by means of a simple X-ray. In surgery, it has become so important that very few operations are now undertaken without a preliminary study by means of the X-ray machine. Not only does this marvelous discovery reveal fractured bones and foreign bodies, but it will bring to light diseases of the stomach, intestines and urinary systems.

It actually points to the location of tumors and cancers. It has been used even in obstetrics, where it may show the size of the pelvis and thus eliminate many of the dangers of childbirth.

In medicine, it is of value in the early diagnosis of rickets, pneumonia and tuberculosis. It has saved thousands and thousands of lives by the recognition of unsuspected tuberculosis where, in its early stages, there are no visible signs except by the use of the X-ray.

Indeed, by the use of this agent tremendous advance has been made in medicine. It has saved thousands of lives and prevented many serious diseases.

Answers to Health Queries

P. S. Q.—What can be done for body odor and what is the cause of the trouble?

A.—Daily bathing, frequent changing of the clothing, as well as full attention to the elimination should all make for improvement under these circumstances. The trouble is frequently due to auto-intoxication—the system is absorbing the poisons and waste thrown off by the body, instead of eliminating them in the proper way. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

M. J. D. Q.—What will remove hardened wax in the ears? It has affected the hearing of one ear slightly.

A.—It would be wise to have it removed by an ear specialist. It is unwise to tamper with the delicate organism of the ear.

I. M. Q.—When can be done for eyelashes which curl in instead of out? The inside of the eyelids are quite inflamed—what treatment would be helpful? 2.—What is a moron?

A. See an eye specialist and he will outline proper treatment. The inflammation is probably due to irritation of the eye, the eye is sometimes daily with a weak solution of boric acid and applying 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment to the lids at night. This will give increased comfort and relief. 2.—A moron is a person of low mentality—an adult with the mind and outlook of a child of about eight years.

ATHLETICS FAVORED

the fact that Philadelphia has in "Lefty" Grove and "Gig George" Earnshaw two of the greatest pitchers who ever threw a ball and the added fact that there is some doubt that "Sparky" Adams, the regular St. Louis third baseman, may not be able to start in the series because of an injury to his ankle sustained in a recent baseball field meet.

Yet there is a strong belief that the struggle this year will be considerably more evenly contested than last fall when the Athletics won four out of six games played. Connie Mack has stressed upon his men that the Cardinals must be real good this season to have won the pennant so early and by such an impressive margin.

Confident and full of fight, the Athletics arrived in St. Louis last evening, too late to indulge in practice at Sportsman's Park. They were greeted at the railroad station by a curious crowd. They quickly jumped into taxicabs and were rushed to the Kingsway hotel, their headquarters.

The Cardinals managed to get in a final workout at the ball park. Manager Street did not make the practice session compulsory but most of the regulars took advantage of the opportunity to limber up and sharpen their batting eyes. "Sparky" Adams was out there hitting balls from the batting cage. He stepped about gingerly and informed an International News Service reporter his ankle was giving him trouble and he feared he might not be ready today. Little Andy High, who will substitute at third if Adams does not start, indulged in a vigorous workout. "Chief" Hafey, the Cardinals slugging outfielder who led the National League in batting this season, was the last man to leave the park.

FAVOR GROVE

Indications were that the probable pitchers today would be Paul Derringer for St. Louis and either Grove or Earnshaw for Philadelphia. However, Manager Mack, following his usual custom, declined to announce his starting pitcher in advance. Manager Derringer said he virtually had decided upon Derringer, his "yearling" giant right-hander from Kentucky and Illinois.

Derringer is pitching his first year in major league baseball. He came up from the Cardinals farm at Rochester, N. Y. He has had a great season, winning eighteen games and losing eight. He is only 25 years old and is cool as a cucumber under fire. His best delivery is an overhand curve ball which drops fully a foot as it nears the plate. He also has a baffling side-arm throw and an excellent change of pace.

Any member of the family of Ross Skaggs, W. Water-st, is invited to be a guest of The Herald to the Grand Theatre. Call at this office for ticket.
